Waiting game over freeway path may be ending

By DON GREEN Staff Writer

Two long-time Upland residents are hoping their waiting days for sale of land tied up by uncertainty over the Foothill Freeway are nearing an end.

But plans to develop single-family homes on property owned by former Mayor Abner Haldeman recently encountered a new snag when the California Department of Transportation (Caltrans) asked for 10 extra feet of

And Ronald Beck - attorney with a Long Beach law firm representing Nelson Gray — said he believes a suit filed against Caltrans on behalf of the property owner would still be viable" because of the years during which no development could occur.

The attorney added that he is "waiting on pins and needles" to see a written offer today from the state to buy the right-of-way property.

The fate of the Foothill Freeway is still in doubt while the California Transportation Commission studies whether the proposed 28.3-mile extension from La Verne to San Bernardino should be abandoned.

However, the commission in January also authorized Caltrans to resume purchase, up to $1 million total, of right of way in cases where the land is threatened by

That decision helped prompt the Upland City Council in February to approve a zone change sought by Haldeman since 1977, but continued repeatedly by the council for fear of giving the state the impression Upland no longer wanted the freeway.

The former mayor owns 10 of the 15 acres at the southwest corner of San Antonio and 20th Street. Like Gray, Haldeman owned citrus groves that have been a

With the zone change granted and the tentative tract approved, it appeared Haldeman might have a relatively clear path for sale of freeway land to the state and of the remaining property for development.

However, during negotiations with Caltrans he was told the state now wants a 310-foot width for the right of way instead of the 300 feet previously indicated and used in drawing up the lots in the tentative tract map.

City Manager Lee Travers told the council Monday night that short of eliminating one lot and designing others to be wider and shallower, variances would be needed to regain the 10 feet by reducing road width, lot dimensions or parkways planned.

Mayor George Gibson said, "This is a situation Caltrans has created," and suggested the $500 filing fee for variance be waived by the city should the request come before the planning commission at a special Haldeman said he was uncertain whether current escrow could be held off until the September commission meeting, and noted that when the project engineer asked for the freeway width he was told 300 feet.

He said Wednesday he is waiting for Caltrans approval of an offer for state purchase of the southern half of the

Beck, Gray's attorney, said the state will make an offer today on 16.8 of the 20 acres his client owns at the southwest corner of Euclid Avenue and 20th Street. However, a Caltrans representative has indicated the offer would be in the form of acquisition rather than a

He added that the case now stands waiting for Caltrans' answer to the complaint seeking $600,000 for value of right-of-way land and damages allegedly making the rest of the property unusable.

Census shows bigger population in Upland

A preliminary total from Upland's special census last month shows the city with a population of 44,761, a figure that would mean an extra $50,000 in state funds over the next

Other results from the count are still being tallied and the total must be certified by the state, but the figure confirms Upland is no longer San Bernardino County's third most populous city

A special census in Rancho Cucamonga recently found 49,450 residents living in that rapidly grow-

Upland's own population has grown 37.5 percent from 1970, when 32,551 people lived in the city. And the preliminary total is nearly three times the 15,918 residents counted in Finance Director Anthony Andrade said the city does not expect a substantial revision in the population total, but the planning department is checking to ensure all residents were reached.

Planning Director Bill Young had estimated the city's population at somewhere between 45,000 and 50,-

Andrade said any large discrepancy between the count and the planning department's review in particular areas canvassed could result have not yet been determined, but Andrade said the total would come close to the $25,000 authorized by the city council.

He said the new population total would be the basis of returning some of the tax revenue for 18 months to two years, meaning the city's "profit" from the census would exceed the $25,000 for one year.

Andrade estimated the state Department of Finance may have the new population certified effective Jan. 1, but added the figure could be applied to some funding this year

Figures breaking the population down by age, sex and race and showing occupancy by type of dwelling unit are still being tallied.

Publication budget okayed by trustees

By STEVE STANDERFER Staff Writer

Upland Elementary School District trustees approved a publication budget Tuesday night of $10.1 million, but not before trustees had suggested cuts be made to make room in the budget for a typing class and teacher aides. The board will hold a public hearing Sept. 4 to allow for further discussion and changes of the 1979-80 fiscal year budget. This year's income of $9,525,855 is made up mostly of state funds and it represents a 7.5 percent increase over 1978-79 income, according to district officials. Total expenditures of $9,523,747 show an increase in spending of 7.8 percent over last year. The budget will allow for a reserve of $646,887, $2.108 more than this year's beginning reserve.

But, much of that reserve could be eaten up at the negotiating table when classified and certificated employees ask for salary increasees, which have not been alloted for in the budget.

Trustees indicated there were two expenditures eliminated from the tentative budget that should have been left in.

Trustee Dale Andersen said that equipment and supplies for a new typing class for junior high students should be left in the budget, along with some classroom aide positions. The two items amounted to $44,200

Andersen suggested cuts be made in the textbook, instructinal supplies and travel and conference reimbursement budgets which would provide enough money to run the typing class and pay teacher's Board chairman Barry Brandt agreed with Andersen that the money for a typing class should be left in the budget, but he didn't feel any money should be taken from the travel and conference reimbursement budget.

Increase reported in serious crimes except for robberies

Serious crime increased in every category except robberies in Upland during the first half of 1979. Police recorded 1,295 incidents in seven major categories through June, compared to 1,150 for the first half of 1978. The overall increase was 12.6 percent.

Broken down by categories the totals are: murder, 1 (compared to none during the first six months of 1978); forcible rape, 9 (4); robbery, 24 (27); aggravated assault, 35 (34); burglary, 573 (505); theft, 553 (502), and auto theft, 100 (78).

Central schools contract for lunches

Central School District lunches will be provided by San Bernardino Unified School District beginning in Additionally, the district plans to implement some sort of free, or minimal-cost breakfast program, possibly by October, according to Superintendent Norman Guith.

The district has contracted with San Bernardino for an anticipated 137,000 lunches to be served in 1979-80, in an effort to halt loss of district money by continuing with its own lunch program.

It also hopes to upgrade the quality of the lunch through the new program.

The district lost approximately $13,000 through its lunch program last year, even with federal and state reimbursements and student cost, according to Guith. The district will also lose money during its first year of operation with San Bernardino, but the loss will be due to purchase of equipment for implementing the new That cost will diminish by the second year.

Equipment needed includes some minor building modifications, installation of sinks, fly fans and installation of a countertop.

Also included is purchase of a freezer.

Guith estimates the necessary equipment will cost $28,000, with $7,000 of that paid by the district and the rest by state assistance.

The lunches will be cooked in San Bernardino and then trucked to Rancho Cucamonga on trays that will maintain the proper hot or cold temperatures required. Guith believes the food will arrive fresher than did the former pre-packaged lunches.

He also anticipates that more and more students will eventually purchase the upgraded lunches.

Approximately 30 percent of the district students now buy their lunches and Guith believes this might increase to about 80 percent if the lunch is improved.

Guith, along with many educators, believes good breakfast and lunch programs make for better students. To this end, he hopes to implement a breakfast program at the school by October.

But he said nothing firm has been established for a new breakfast program yet.

The new lunch program will result in an increased lunch price of 70 cents for kindergarten through fifth grade and 80 cents for junior high students.

The price was previously 5 cents less.

full months of the program. The biggest drop came in June when Upland recorded 80 traffic accidents compared to 110 last year.

Estes said the police department used analysis of past accident histories to concentrate the patrol at locations where collisions have been most common.

Along with trying to give the motorcycle officers a "very high visibility," the police chief has assigned the three policemen to spend all their duty time on traffic enforcement and education.

"Before our officers worked traffic more or less on a part-time basis," he said, noting their traffic enforcement was interrupted by crime calls.

The new emphasis on traffic enforcement is reflected in a dramatic increase in the number of citations issued during the first half of 1979. Through June, officers issued 5,-

West End record sales show slump

By VANCE DURGIN

Staff Writer Sales of phonograph records are in a slump nationally, and some West End record dealers are feeling the pinch.
"It's been kind of rough," said John Stout, manager of

The Wherehouse record store in Upland. Kern Stahler, manager of Hits For All in Montclair

Plaza, agreed.

"We've all been hit hard," he said.
For those who've watched the phenomenal growth of the record industry over the past five years, the first half of 1979 must have come as a shock. The signs are everywhere of a general retrenchment in the industry. Profits are down, along with sales. Layoffs are up. CBS Records, for instance, fired more than 50 employees in June and canceled its annual record sales convention, citing excessive costs

Warner Bros. Records has also made cuts in its staff. Other disturbing signs for those in the business include the fact that returns of unsold records by retail stores are at a high level and that sales of blank recording tape have increased as records sales have declined, an indication that listeners may be making their own taped copies of records or recording from the radio. The local picture, for the most part, reflects those

"I would say sales are down about 30 percent," noted Stahler, who said he had worked in three different stores so far this year

His estimate matches estimates of the sales decline nationally given by industry officials.

"About the only thing that's really selling big right now is the Knack (an L.A.-based band)," Stahler said.

The lack of current releases by established artists has hurt sales, Stout said. "If you look at what's in the top 10 right now, you'll find it's mostly disco," he said. "That wouldn't be the case if there were major releases out." Typically, record retailers count on releases by established stars to boost sales. A customer who comes in to buy the latest Eagles record, often buys others as well, retailers say. As a result, the lack of such releases this summer has hindered sales. Another factor in slow sales cited by local dealers was talk of a forthcoming recession coupled with increasing

"The fact that records and tapes are made from petroleum hasn't helped any," said Stahler, "because prices have continued to increase.

Most new LPs carry a list price of $8.98, which means they can be bought at discount for about $6 - or $1 more

The price increase may not seem like much, but dealers believe it has slowed sales. "People just aren't spending as much right now," said Stahler

Both Stahler and Stout, however, felt that business would pick up later this year, and would be much improved by Christmas. There are several major releases scheduled in the next few months," said Stout. "Fleetwood Mac, the Eagles, Led Zeppelin."

Retailers are counting on such artists to bolster sales. At least one dealer in the area, however, doesn't feel the need for such a boost

"Profits of record companies may be down, but we've seen no decline here," said Joel Bellman, manager of Rhino Records in Claremont. "The higher list prices haven't hurt us either, though customers complain about

The store Bellman manages differs from other local retail outlets in that it sells both new and used records. As a result, Bellman hasn't felt the sales slump.

"We tend to feature the more obscure artists here," he said, "though we sell major artists as well. I think the idea that major artists help sales is mostly a myth."

Rising prices in the industry, however, are no myth, and Bellman sees more increases in the future.

"I've heard that the new Eagles LP will list for $9.98 and the new Fleetwood Mac double album will be $16.98," he said, emphasizing that his information was Whether such higher prices will have an effect on an already depressed record market remains to be seen.

Grant to Chaffey College termed 'unfortunate'

By STEVE STANDERFER

Staff Writer A committee investigating a controversial decision to give Chaffey College $270,000 from a "state "special needs" fund has said action should be taken to prevent any other such incidents from happening.

The committee labeled the awarding of the grant "unfortunate" but did not say what action should be taken. *Recommendations will be made at *a meeting of the Association of California Community College *Administrators (ACCCA).

After Chaffey College was first turned down for a grant from the fund by the Community College Chancellor's office, the California Community Colleges Board of *Governors was persuaded by -Chaffey and other community college representatives to change the rules, allowing 12 colleges to receive $1.8 million earlier this

Because of concern by some college executives over the awarding of the money, two California organizations of college executives asked the ACCCA to look into the matter. What exactly was being investigated by the ACCCA remains vague, but Ray Ellerman, president of the Southern California Community College Chief Executive Officers Association, said the inquiry was aimed at 'justification' for Chaffey and others receiving the money.

A two-man committee on professional standards for the ACCCA assigned to investigate the matter this spring recently completed its report.

A statement on the committee's findings written by former ACCCA president Frank Pearce calls the action by the board of governors "unfortunate" and says "the whole issue could and should have been

The $15 million in the special needs fund was established by the Legislature following the passage of Proposition 13 to help schools facing financial emergencies. The funds came from money that would otherwise have been allocated to community colleges. Any of the $15 million not used for special needs would eventually be divided equally among all community colleges in the state. Steve Weiner, president of the board of governors, said Chaffey College applied to the chancellor's office for a grant to help finance state-mandated programs for handicapped students.

But, the chancellor's office turned down the application because it did not meet regulations set up by the 15-member board of governors, Weiner said.

Representatives from Chaffey and three other colleges then appealed the chancellor's decision and they led an effort to change the regulations at some of the board of governors' meetings. There was a split on the board, Weiner said, but the rule changes were finally made to disburse "more money than would have been

Of the 12 districts that were eligible, all 12 received part of the $1.8 million, including Imperial Valley, Compton and Ventura, according to a spokesman for the Community Colleges Office in

In a letter being sent by Pearce to community college presidents on the investigation, he says: "No single individual or agency deserves the blame or credit for the board of governors action which has caused concern among community college leaders in California.

"The unfortunate action of the board of governors was brought about by the combination of a number of events, conditions and personalities.

"The whole issue could and should have been avoided.

Chaffey College president James Catanzaro said the action awarding the grant was not unfortunate, but it was unfortunate that the board of chancellors had not agreed on the grant the first time.

Catanzaro said a public hearing was held by the board of governors on whether the grants should be awarded and nobody appeared saying that the schools did not deserve the money.

The Chaffey president said a number of colleges that could not qualify for the special-needs funds became upset and jealous. If the 12 colleges had not received the special funds, it would have left more money to be divided among all community colleges when the fund was equally disbursed

Local child abuse reports increase alarmingly

By RITA BUSBY Staff Writer

Child abuse has increased alarmingly the past two months and law enforcement and child protective agencies say the increase is expected to continue.

But officials disagree on the causes. Some say the impact of the death of 2-year-old Tina Calderon of Fontana in June, who died at the hands of her father and his girlfriend, has spurred public awareness and resulted in more reportings.

Others say the incidence of abuse itself has increased due to the heat, lack of summer school, which provides some relief for distressed parents, and the phenomena of widespread overall violence staling the country.

And yet one official said more abuse would probably be reported if school was in session because teachers and counselors provide information about abused youngsters who turn to them for help.

But whatever the reasons, officials appear to be reeling from the effects of an abused 6-month-old child who died Wednesday at Loma Linda University Medical Center from apparent child abuse and another 18-monthold youngster who died there later that same day, also an apparant victim of abuse.

Murder complaints are being sought against the 17-year-old mother of 6-month-old David Farren, according to San Bernardino County Sheriff's office.

Her 30-year-old boyfriend, George Torres, 30, with whom she was living in a Colton motel, is also Both were arrested on suspicion of felony child abuse after the child was admitted to the hospital July 27 suffering from numerous bruises, head and body injuries and internal injuries.

The child died several hours after he was taken off life- support systems. An autopsy indicates the child died of massive brain damage.

Name of the mother, who was taken to juvenile hall, is being withheld because of her age. It is uncertain yet whether she will be tried as a juvenile or as an adult. No complaints have been issued yet concerning the death of 18-month-old Tamara L. Blakemore of Redlands, who entered the hospital shortly after the Farren baby.

Redlands police said the matter will be "thoroughly investigated" before "and if" any arrests are made. A spokesman for the San Bernardino County Coroner's Office said the toddler apparently died of a skull fracture, possibly related to child abuse

The spokesman also said it appeared the child had sustained injuries on several other occasions.

A babysitter took the child to the hospital, officials Deputy District Attorney David Weed, assigned to the juvenile court in San Bernardino, said his department is 'alarmed" at the increase in child abuse and that they are wondering why San Bernardino County has been hit so hard with child abuse recently. Several West End law enforcement agencies, when questioned about increases in child abuse replied, "If you can find out why, let us know." Detective Doug Hutchison of the Fontana Police Department, who investigated the Calderon death, and who complained of nightmares following the episode, said, "We're getting a rash of child abuse cases and don't know why.'

But he also alluded to the heat, increased public awareness, lack of school and general increased

"We just can't nail it down," he said.

Fred Drury, Montclair Police Department spokesman, said their department usually has five or six cases per 'But we've had three severe cases the last two

And Detective Richard Sill from the Chino Police Department said, "We seem to be pulling them (child abusers) out of the woodwork."

But he said an increase in reporting, not necessarily an increase in abuse, may be contributing to the flood of child abuse cases.

Police agencies, however, have no composite statistics dealing with child abuse.

Several agencies are trying to compile statistics, but haven't completed the task yet.

But no "definite statistics or comparisons" are yet available, according to Tom Johnson, social worker with the San Bernardino County Child Protective Services in "Our phones are ringing off the wall, though," he said, concerning child abuse cases.

Johnson believes increased reporting of child abuse is due to increased public awareness

He said during the past three months, 327 referrels of West End children, allegedly in danger, have come to his

Of those, 113 involved physical abuse, 22 were sexual abuse and 116 were neglect or emotional abuse. The remainder were requests for placement of children and advice and information.

John Meier, former director of the U.S. Office of Child Welfare for the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, and now head of Children's Village, U.S.A., a national center in Beaumont for the rehabilitation of abused children and their abusing parents, said they have experienced a definite increase in child abuse.

And while he attributes much of the increase to public awareness, he said child abuse itself appears to be Part of the increased reporting, he believes, is due to new laws aimed at censuring physicians who don't report possible abuse.

It was Loma Linda Hospital staff members who reported both recent cases of alleged child abuse to authorities

But regardless of the causes of increased reporting of child abuse, all authorities said they hope the trend of child abuse will reverse itself - but they don't believe it will in the near future.

Persons seeking help now, either as a potentially abusing parent or as a citizen concerned with a potential child abuser, can call the CPS office at 988-1071 or 988-1075 or their local police department. No name need be

$16 million budget presented for college

By STEVE STANDERFER Staff Writer

publication budget of $16,043,366 as approved by Chaffey College trustees at a meeting held in Chino Thursday night.

The 1979-80 general fund budget

ves each division of the school out the same amount of money they had last year, according to Robert Totten, assistant superintendent of business services. The budget reflects only a 4 rcent increase in state block - the mininum increase available - down from the 7 percent Chaffey administrators had predicted they would get.

"It is a budget we're proud to present with what we've got, Totten told the board as they met in the Chino City Council chambers. We worked very hard to bring you a balanced budget.

Part of the work Totten was referring to took place in the past ew weeks when the college's staff and budget committee worked on balancing the preliminary budget which had expenditures for $1.6 million over expected income for the year.

About $1 million of the money cut from the budget came from a soposed 9.47 percent salary rease for classified and dificated employees, according Dr. James Catanzaro, college s the budget now stands, there is reserve for salary increases of 1250,000 of this is rked to come from salary ngs through attrition of school staff who will not be replaced, Catanzaro said.

Catanzaro said an analysis was hade to get an idea of how many of the college's employees planned to resign and that's how the salary savings was estimated.

Regarding the prospects of a raise for employees, Catanzaro said "I think the employees that have been gone for the summer are going to be appointed" because the college is stting less money than expected.

There have been no negotiations for any salary hikes, but Catanzaro set an Oct. 31 deadline for any negotiations. By this time the district should know if it is going to receive any additional money.

.. we will try to raise as much money as we possibly can" to give workers raises, Catanzaro said.

In a salary related board action Thursday, classified employees were granted a 6.58 percent salary increase retroactive to July 1, 1978 through Feb. 28, 1979.

The increase is the same amount granted earlier this year to certificated employees in a retroactive increase for the same

A 12-member budget committee representing people from various sectors, including employee groups, of Chaffey College worked on trimming the "bare-bones budget."

'Every item here (on the budget) has probably had a better hearing than any budget I've worked on... Totten said referring to the committee's review of the budget. Trustee Dr. Lester Stroh voiced his concern over not having enough money available for the upkeep of buildings and grounds on campus. He was told by Totten that not only Chaffey College, but all public entities would suffer noticeable deterioration because of Proposition 13 within three to five years if nothing is done to prevent it. Catanzaro warned that if more money is not made available to the state's schools within two years, California will no longer be known as a leader in higher education.

In time, it is estimated that almost beam treatment, is lay flat. Actual radiation three-quarters of the medical center's patients who undergo radiation therapy will be treated with the linear accelerator.

What makes this machine

so special? In technical terms, it can emit two major types of radiation - electromagnetic radiation (X-rays), somewhat similar to the sun's rays, which destroys cancer cells by means of ionization; and electron beam, which is generated by accelerating electrons in a columnated tube.

The machine is capable of developing 18-million-volt and 12-million-volt X-ray beams, and six- to 20million-volt electron beams

In lay terms, the machine is capable of a greater variety and intensity of radiation than others. With older equipment, the instance often arose where a doctor wanted to radiate a tumor located deep in the abdomen, chest, or pelvis, and found it necessary to deliver excessive irradiation to the superficial tissues.

Conversely, unwanted radiation reached deep tissues when superficial tumors were treated. With this machine, both of these deficiencies can be largely overcome.

This linear accelerator offers capabilities for more sophisticated procedures than others on the market. According to James Slater, MD, professor of radiology and chairman of the department of radiology at LLUMC, if the tumor can be accurately located, the radiation can be directed so that there is less than one

Kaiser health plan boosts rates 25.5%

By RITA BUSBY Staff Writer

Kaiser Foundation Health Plan Tuesday announced a 25.5 percent increase in membership rates for 1980 in the Southern California

Other regions throughout the nation also will be affected by rate increases, but no announcements have been made yet.

In San Bernardino and Riverside counties, 210,000 Kaiser health plan members will be affected as new contracts are negotiated during 1980 by their employers.

Almost all Kaiser memberships are derived through company plans. In general, all plans and categories of care will increase between $8 and $22 per month.

General inflation and rising costs of providing care were cited as reasons for the increase.

Kaiser officials maintain that the increase is within President Carter's voluntary wage and price standards concerning hospital costs and expenditure increases Recommendations from the Carter administration have varied between 14 and 17 percent during the

A spokesman for the health plan said health maintenance organizations like Kaiser are exempt from the recommendation. But Michael Katcher, vice president and Southern California Regional Health Plan manager, said the increase remains in voluntary compliance with President Carter's wage and price standards

"We have notified the Council on Wage and Price Stability of our dues rate increase and our intention to remain in voluntary compliance with wage and price standards in 1980," Katcher said in a press release.

Staggered expiration dates of members' contracts will help the medical group stay within the president's 17 percent guideline. Contracts expire over a two-year period, from 1980 to 1981.

As an example, Kaiser Steel Corp. employees will not be affected by the rate increases until 1980 negotiations that begin in November of that year.

Katcher said the health care system experienced no increases in 1979 during a time the Carter administration recommended a ceiling of 17 percent on hospital cost increases.

A spokesman said the company should have had a 9 percent increase last year so this year's increase would be smaller and "it wouldn't have looked so bad."

Katcher said the company avoided increases in 1979 because of unanticipated revenues of $27 million available from 1978.

The system has experienced an annual 11.2 percent cost increase since 1974 with the exception of 1979 which was zero.

A spokesman said that even with the 25 percent increase the company is "still below most other healthcare systems, and notably below

Blue Cross," for example. He said new rates are close to what Blue Cross charged in 1977 for similar payment of services (although the two are hard to compare because Kaiser offers a prepaid plan.

Kaiser-Permanente utilizes six different health-care plans with varying premiums and clauses.

An an example, Plan A, which covers 75 percent of Kaiser members, currently costs $32.16 per month per individual. It will be raised to $40.20 per month in 1980.

For a couple, the premium goes from $62.42 to $80.40 and for coverage of three or more family members, it jumps from $91.08 to $113.85.

The spokesman said all plans and categories will increase between $8 to $22 per month beginning in Jan.

Kaiser Foundation Health Plan members in Southern California receive their prepaid medical care from the Southern California Permanente Medical Group of about 1,600 physicians.

About 13,000 other health care professional and administrative personnel are employed.

CIW visitor hospitality center proposed by Friends Outside

By RICHARD PERAZA Staff Writer

Construction of a new visitor hospitality center at the California Institution for Women in Frontera has been proposed.

The estimated $30,000 project is proposed by the San Bernardino County Chapter of Friends Outside, which established a $20,000 I hospitality center at the California Institution for Men in Chino.

Friends Outside is a statewide organization of volunteers dedicated to nelping inmates families cope with prison life.

Julio Romano, a Friends Outside community organizer, said he is just beginning to try and raise money to build a hospitality center for the 830-inmate women's prison. 'We don't have any money yet, right now we're in the process of making contacts," he said. Romano said he hopes to get most of the money in the form of direct donations but will stage fund raising events if necessary. "There's a lot of money out there and a lot of people are very interested," he said.

The proposed hospitality center will be much like the one at CIM. The CIM center, a converted relatives visiting inmates. Romaon said he is currently working out of the CIM facility.

The biggest difference between the center proposed for the women's prison and the one now in operation at the men's prison is it will be a permanent structure instead of a mobile home, he said.

It will probably be located in the parking lot on the CIW grounds, he Romano said he is hoping for completion by July, 1981.

Presently, he said, there is no place at CIW where visitors can wait comfortably while they are cleared for entry at the gates.

"Right now people have to line up outside in the hot sun along the fence for two or three hours. There's no shade," Romano said. "People get stuck out there and they have no transportation and no information. They're often afraid because they have a loved one in prison for the first time.

Friends Outside has established 14 hospitality centers in other prisons throughout the state, Romano said.

He said he is optimistic about the new project despite the fact that about $8,000 is still owed on the CIM facility, a center that is about a year

Airfield improvements proposed

By STEVE STANDERFER Staff Writer

Chino Airport and Brackett Field are included in a Federal Aviation Administration proposal for new runways and instruments at small airports to lessen the chances of midair collisions between commercial jets and private planes.

Under the proposed $100 million plan, improvements would be made at 86 satellite airports in 56 metropolitan areas by 1982. The Chino and La Verne airports are the only two in the Los Angeles metropolitan area that are scheduled for improvements to help relieve congestion at Los Angeles International Airport.

The plan is an outgrowth of the 1978 collision near San Diego's Lindbergh Field between a Pacific Southwest Airlines Boeing 727 and a small Cessna which killed 144

Chino Airport is scheduled to be one of 24 airports nationwide to receive an instrument-landing system which would allow general aviation pilots to make instrument landings and practices instead of using major airports, according to Alex Garvis, a spokesman for the FAA. The new instrument systems will enable small planes to land at the satellite airports in bad weather.

According to an FAA spokesman in Washington, Brackett Field has already been allotted $630,000 in this year's budget for improvements to its taxiway.

Besides instrument-landing systems and improvements to taxiways and runways under the plan, other improvements at small airports include automatic weather reporting systems and airplane parking areas.

'Generally, the idea is to give these satellite airports short term benefits that are improving their safety and at the same time helping to relieve congestion at a hub airport," Garvis said.

Another airport receiving the instrument-landing system is Montgomery Field in San Diego. The Cessna that collided with the PSA jetliner last year was using Lindbergh Field because nearby Montgomery Field, used for general aviation or small aircraft traffic, was not equipped with an instrument-landing system for student pilot practice.

The National Transportation Safety Board blamed the crash on the PSA crew, which failed to keep the small plane in sight.

FAA administrator Langhorne Bond said the San Diego collision speeded up consideration of improving satellite airports.

The 24 new instrument-landing systems had originally been planned for replacements in 24 older facilities but "we'll have to let the old hardware run a little longer,'

Bond said he hoped the improved satellite airports will attract business fleets, commuter airlines and private pilots.

Delays for commercial airline passengers at major airports because of air traffic will be reduced he said.

Bond said other improvements will be possible at a total of 236 airports in 75 metropolitan areas depending on congressional action

Brunch satisfies holiday guests

Roll out the welcome mat for relatives and friends in town for the long holiday weekend. Start the day with a late morning brunch that's sure to satisfy most any appetite. Plan your menu with convenience in mind and feature recipes prepared quickly and easily in the microwave.

Tips for shoppers

takes extra effort to squeeze their money's worth from the shrinking dollar

Here's a list of tips to guide you through the supermarket maze.

- Prepare a shopping list throughout the week - not five minutes before leaving for the market.

Attractive foods packed in glass bottles and jars will add excitement to menus. Avoid purchasing "wasted calories" by eating before your shopping trip.

- Keep track of prices so you'll know when something is truly on "special" or 'price - reduced" and not merely conveniently displayed.

- Stretch and bend to see

221 Yale Ave., 828-8293

Smart shoppers know it products on the top and bottom shelves, not just those at eye - level. There may be more economical brands beyond eye-level.

> Let packaging help you. Foods packed in glass let you see the quality of what you're buying so there's no surprise when you open the container.

The same goes for meats. Check both sides when packaged in clear trays. If in doubt, ask the store butcher for another

- Remember that some purchases can do double duty. Since juices, for example, are packed in glass, the bottles can be used later for iced tea or iced coffee, etc. Smaller containers, such as baby food jars, can hold spices in the kitchen or nails in the garage

- Lessen your load by buying beverages in lightweight glass containers,

Members of the work team were: Lori Lippe, Debbie Nevarez, Curtis Nevarez, Keith Heasley, Mike Womack, Beth Swayze, Starlyn Swayze, Andrea Sanders, Lidia Reyes, Vern Price, Milt Wornack and Rev. Gant.

The team has a slide presentation to tell the project's story to interested groups, organizations and churches. Requests should be mailed to First U.M.C. of Montclair, 9950 Fremont Ave., Montclair, CA. 91763 real production number, lying someplace between Rome at its decadent best and the harem of Sultan Ali Pasha -- that's the Mark III master bedroom. It's perhaps an understatement to say that Americans have never seen anything like this master bedroom in a development home and very little that can rival it in a custom home under $1,000,000.

The master bedroom isn't one room, it's a suite of rooms the size of which exceeds the total square footage in many small homes. One enters this chamber of delights through a long, plushly-carpeted, mirrored corridor that hints at wonders to come by reflecting a dazzling array of scintillating images. The first of these appears to be a lush green tropical rain forest, but is revealed to be a voluptuous garden spa festooned with tropical plants of all descriptions. With light filtered through green leaves from a skylight, it is a modern facsimile of the Garden

The elevated bedroom salon is the most seductive enclosure ever created for conjugal felicity - absolutely guaranteed to single-handedly undo the combined efforts of puritans, celibates and the zero-population growth people. More than a visual treat, it is an absolute assault of the most pleasing sensations ever experienced by man. It cannot be described, it must be experienced and hopefully only by those who have a firm grip on their emotions.

Leaving the bedroom salon, one descends into a sitting room/retreat that wields a calming influence appropriate for reading, lounging and quiet contemplation.

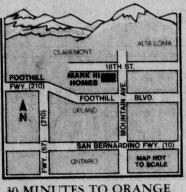

The mirrored dressing lounge is flooded with soft light and appointed with handcrafted hardwood cabinetry and a capacious marble pullman with double sinks and decorator hardware. The bath contains a Roman, bathing pool

Certainly, anyone's ultimate home should have, as an essential part, a bedroom that delights, comforts and calms. The master bedroom suite at Mark III certainly is the master bedroom in the ultimate home.

Unfortunately, there is not space here to describe the other pleasures c these sumptuous homes. With impressive living rooms in the grand manner, formal dining rooms, airy spacious garden kitchens, and estatesize lots, they are without question some of the finest homes you'll ever see anyplace.

'Suzie' flops

Few local residents seem to want new $1 coin

Among West End residents the new Susan B. Anthony dollar is as welcome as a $2 bill.

That's the way local banking officials assess consumer acceptance of the so-called "Suzie" four weeks after its introduction.

"It's like trying to hand out poison ivy, " said Stu Hunter, an officer of

Lloyd's Bank in Chino. "At this point there's no great demand for them," said Harry Haskell, manager of the Upland

Bank of America branch office. "People would rather not accept them," said Jim Bass, an official with First Trust Bank of Ontario. "Right now they're moving slowly."

Such action on the part of consumers must be a disappointment to government planners, who launched the new dollar coin in a blaze of publicity July 2.

The coin, similar to a quarter in size, was seen by Treasury officials as eventually replacing the current paper dollar. With that end in mind, the government minted 500 million of the new coins in the hope they would circulate freely.

The move seemed to make good economic sense. The coins, it was reasoned, would last about 15 years in circulation, compared to 18 months for paper currency. Thus even though the coins cost twice as much to produce, they would actually save the government money in the long run.

The only problem, it seems, is that planners didn't pay enough attention to the coin's new size.

'They're too much like quarters," Lloyd's Bank's Hunter said. "People are afraid they'll get the two coins confused."

Though Treasury officials point out that the new coin is slightly heavier (.3 ounces compared to .2 ounces) and slightly larger (1.04 inches compared to .96 inches) than the quarter, the difference apparently is too slight.

"I've heard stories of people getting them confused with quarters," said First Trust's Bass. "In one case a man thought he was leaving a waitress four quarters for a tip. The coins turned out to be dollars.

In addition to consumers, businesses have resisted the new coin, bankers say.

"They seem reluctant to take them," said Bass. "They separate them from the rest of their cash, then bring them in and trade them for paper money.

Local merchants contacted, however, said the new coin had caused them few problems - mainly because so few are circulating. "They've been insignificant really," said an employee of an Upland food store. We've had a few, not many," said Gayle Spinney, manager of an Upland supermarket. Spinney added that the new coins can cause a problem by jamming automatic coin counting machines used by the "We have to separate them and count them by hand," he said. "Of course, the old dollars wouldn't fit the machine either, but they didn't look like quarters.'

When the new coins were introduced, it was predicted the vending-machine industry would benefit by modifying machines to accept them.

Al Mullman, co-owner of a Pomona vending-machine firm. however, said there were no immediate plans to change machines owned by his company.

"We're going to wait and see what happens first," he said. Mullman added that the first machines modified to accept the new coins will probably be juke boxes and cigarette machines.

'With food machines, you usually have a dollar bill changer nearby,

Mullman said the changeover would be a simple matter on most machines made within the last five The changeover of the machines, however, depends on the dollar coins circulating widely - an occurrence that seems unlikely. Bank of America's Haskell

spurs look at policy

By KEN SWART Staff Writer

Ontario-Montclair School District's policy of leasing unused vacant land or existing school buildings to public agencies or private firms may be re-examined, the school board indicated Thursday.

An Ontario church's request to lease vacant land from the district for an overflow parking area and a playground site was tabled by the board of trustees during its regular monthly meeting.

But it prompted the school board to question if the district's leasing policy is equitable.

Calvary Church, at 1430 N. Grove Ave., Ontario, had asked to lease two acres of vacant district-owned land near the corner of Grove Avenue and Sixth Street.

A lease agreement had been written, requiring the church pay the district a "fair market value price" of $150 per acre per month, according to George Duerr, deputy superintendent of administration.

The school board has the right to charge any amount of money for the lease of district-owned land or facilities, but whatever rates are set should be fair and equitable with other leases, Duerr said.

But Trustee Sam DiGiovanni said it was not equitable to lease two acres to a non-profit organization for $300 per month, when a lease of 14 acres to a profit-making firm for $100 per year had been approved by the board just last month.

The school board last month approved a renewed lease of 14 acres near the corner of Oaks Avenue and Phillips Boulevard to a private firm for the cultivation of strawberries.

Duerr said this lease was negotiated several years ago, and was originally approved as a way of keeping district costs for weed abatement of that land down.

But if the school board, at its September meeting, again considers the Ontario church's request and finds district lease agreements are inequitable, it may direct that the district's leasing policy be changed.

If that happens, several current lease agreements may be affected, Duerr indicated.

'Denturism' strongly opposed by dentists

Staff Writer

The president of the Tri-County Dental Society, representing about 650 area dentists said the group opposes "denturism" and believes an initiative to legalize it is

Dental technicians, backed by several senior citizen and lowgroups, are preparing a of initiative that could eliminate to the dentist in order to in dentures oponents claim the initiative, if sed, would eliminate the middle man (dentist) and cut the cost of dentures in half.

The measure would allow dental laboratory technicians to fit and furnish dentures directly to the consumer, thereby becoming denturists.

Dental technicians now make the dentures for dentists by prescription.

Dr. Judson Klooster, president of the dental society, serving San Bernardino, Riverside and parts Los Angeles counties, said dentists don't believe technicians "are trained to evaluate the complex health problems patients have, or to determine whether tissue is suitable for denture construction.'

Additionally, he said areas that have established denturists have eventually experienced no savings to the consumer as a result.

Using Canada as an example, he said when denturism was first accepted almost 20 years ago, some savings did occur, but eventually the denturists charged as much as Similar programs to the denturism advocated in California have been established in Oregon, Maine and Arizona.

Oregon's plan was implemented last year through voter endorsement, 4 to 1, and after heated battle between dentists and technicians.

The initiative, if passed in California, would create a Denturist Examining Committee within the State Board of Dental Examiners.

Special training and testing would be required before any of the state's approximately 10,000 dental laboratory technicians could acquire a denturist license.

Steven R. Geib, Ontario dental technician, and president of the Tri-County Dental Laboratory Associates, with about 37 member laboratories in Riverside, San Bernardino and parts of Los Angeles counties, said area dentists are, "fighting the initiative tooth and

Dr. Klooster, however, said the dental society will make no concerted stand against the

Instead, individual dentists will be free to oppose it by whatever means they wish to take, such as providing literature in their own offices, he Geib said laboratory owners like himself are "putting their jobs in jeopardy''while fighting for the initiative here.

Proponents of the initiative received a boost to their cause this year when the California State Board of Dental Examiners, charged with licensing and overseeing the state's 15,000 dentists, held a public hearing in Los Angeles last month on denturism.

Another is scheduled this month in San Francisco. Geib, who attended the Los Angeles meeting, said few dentists were present, but laboratory technicians, labor leaders, senior citizens and minorities were present.

Heading the campaign for the initiative are Californians for Denturism, Gray Panthers (senior citizens advocacy group), Congress of California Seniors and several labor unions

These groups hope to obtain the needed 347,000 signatures to bring denturism to the June 1980 primary

The groups maintain that denturism, now heavily opposed by the American and California Dental Associations, could save needy Californians up to $100 million per year in denture care.

In addition to state initiatives, the Federal Trade Commission is studying the possibility of legalized denturism throughout the United

As well as cutting the cost of dentures, Geib said denturists will guarantee the comfort and usfulness of their product.

Geib said dentists will still be able to fit dentures and order them through the laboratories, but will have more time to devote to saving teeth and restoring dental health. But he admitted that not all area dentists see it that way. Klooster, however, said that only about 6 percent of a dentist's business is concerned with dentures and that only about 3 percent of that time is spent by dentists who make

Contracts give pay hikes to deputies, their bosses

The board of supervisors approved separate one-year contracts Monday with San Bernardino County sheriff's deputies and their immediate superiors. The board did so without comment.

The contracts with the Sheriff's Employees Benefit Association contain pay increases and additional benefits.

Approval of the contracts ends a dispute that resulted in a three-week work slowdown by deputies. The slowdown took the form of a "professionalization campaign," during which deputies performed law enforcement tasks "by the book.

Pay increases of 5 percent will be granted to the 639 deputies and district attorney's investigators represented by the association.

They will also receive fully paid medical and dental insurance, an additional $500 in uniform allowance, consolidated annual leave instead of separate holiday and vacation time, and in-service medical and psychological examinations as needed.

The examinations were recommended by two previous grand juries and endorsed by the sheriff's department.

The deputies voted to accept the contract a week ago. A separate contract covers sergeants, lieutenants and captains, who are represented by a different unit of the Sheriff's Employees Benefit Association. Members of this group did not participate in the deputies' slowdown.

The 124 employees in this group will receive pay increases that will amount to 10 percent by April 1980. They will get 2.5 percent now, 2.5 percent in December and 5 percent in April.

The increase of 10 percent was attributed to "wage compression." Sergeants, lieutenants and captains do not receive overtime pay and in some instances earned less than the deputies they supervise.

The contract also provides for a one-time payment of $500 to detectives promoted to sergeant. The money would pay for uniforms and educational expenses.

The latest contracts replace twovear contracts that expired June 30. The new contracts will end June 30, 1980, the same expiration date as county contracts with the San Bernardino Public Employees Association. The latter represents about 90 percent of all other county

R.C. council to purchase computer planning aid

There are no honest-to-goodness crystal balls, but the Rancho Cucamonga City Council is buying the next best thing

It is called a fiscal impact model, and Wednesday night the council added $7,000 to the $43,000 already collected by the Rancho Cucamonga Chamber of Commerce to purchase the computerized aid.

With it, city officials hope they will be able to look five or 10 years down the road and guage the impact of planning decisions made now.

For instance, if the city were to approve a 5,000-home development, planning staff will be able to make a more educated guess as to what the increase in street maintenance costs will be, how much the costs of providing services will rise and how much money the new residents will bring into the community.

With this kind of information, the city can decide before hand whether approval of the development is a sound fiscal decision.

Jack Lam, community development director, said for the $50,000 the city would receive the computer program and the necessary equipment to operate it for the first year.

Following that, the city must rent the system at a cost that would not be likely to exceed $4,000 annually,

The company providing the system will train eight city employees to use the system as well, he said.

Councilman Jon Mikels expressed some concern that the decisionmaking process would be removed from the council and placed on the list of alternatives provided by the Lam assured him that the computer would be just a tool to help the council make a decision.

Chamber officials were reluctant to disclose who contributed the $43,-000 but said the money was donated by some owners of larger tracts of
